AGING ROOM QUATTRO ISS CONCERTO cigars

Just voted by CA magazine No.1 best cigar of the year.

Place your order now and be the first to receive. Here's what the editors of CA magazine had to say about the Aging Room Quattro Iss.

The Aging Room brand, has done even better, standing out again and again in test after test. The name Concerto is a nod to the musical background of Robert House, an accomplished violin player and parent who began selling cigars in 1998. The cigarettes were grown on the Indonesian island of Sumatra and while Sumatra used to grow elsewhere is a big component in the premium cigar industry, the Sumatra that actually grows in Indonesia doesn't stay as hard as the premium cigar, so-called Indonesian tobacco goes into an air machine-made cigars, particularly the dry-rolled variety that are made in Europe. The story goes that the wrapper leaves used for this cigar had been sitting around in a warehouse owned by a German cigar producer before they were found by the Aging Room team. The result is a balanced, sophisticated cigar that delivers rich notes of roasted coffee bean and sweet cedar. It's a lovely profile that maximizes our testing panel's time and time again.

"The Aging Room brand, has come even better, standing out again and again in test after test. The name Concerto is a nod to the musical background of Rafael Ponce, an accomplished cigar maker and parent who began selling cigars in 1994. The company was grown on the traditional island of Sumatra and while Sumatra used to grow elsewhere is a big component in the premium cigar industry, the Sumatra that actually grows in Indonesia doesn't stay as hard as the premium cigar, so-called Indonesian cigars grow out on machine-made cigars, particularly the tiny dry-cured variety that are made in Sumatra. The result is a balanced, sophisticated cigar that delivers rich notes of roasted coffee bean and sweet cedar. It's a lovely process that maintained our lasting love and love again."
